READY, SET, GO: Supervisor Solid Waste Mathew Windle does a final tidy up ahead of the official opening of the new Tip Shop.

Tip-off time at city's new Tip Shop

The new and improved Tip Shop at the Gregadoo Waste Management Centre (GWMC) officially opened for business today (Saturday 15 May 2021), with plenty of bargains on offer.

The updated shop has been located closer to the main entry gates as part of Wagga Wagga City Council's broader upgrade and redevelopment of the GWMC to meet the needs of our growing city.

Gregadoo Waste Management

Facility Manager Geoff Pym said part of these improvements has involved building a new weighbridge closer to Ashford Road, which is in the final stages of construction.

"The old tip shop location did not fit with the aim of removing saleable items from loads during opening hours prior to vehicles crossing the weighbridge," Mr Pym said.

"This new location makes access much quicker and simpler for those people who want to stop in at the shop to drop off items.

"It will also deliver an improved customer experience, with its purpose designed layout, sealed outside area, improved car parking, toilet facilities, a cooled secure shed with presentation racking, security and communications upgrades."

It is hoped the upgrade will encourage more people to bring no-longer wanted items to the shop rather than putting them in general household waste.

Mr Pym said this would benefit the environment and the Wagga Wagga community.

"The goods placed on sale at the facility lead to a reduction in landfill, which reduces the need to construct new landfill cells, which preserves valuable resources," Mr Pym said.

"It also enables the purchase of cheaper items and repurposing of goods, creating employment and business activity."

The new weighbridge facilities, which will be capable of weighing B-Double heavy vehicles in one go, are expected to be completed later this month.

OPEN FOR BUSINESS: The new Tip Shop boasts more space, an undercover area, more parking and an improved shopping experience.

Wagga Wagga celebrates Canberra Raiders' return in rugby league blockbuster

More than a year of planning and preparation paved the way for Canberra Raiders' return to Wagga Wagga last Saturday (8 May) with a sell-out crowd supporting the successful event at McDonalds Park.

It was Newcastle Knights which claimed the 24-16 victory on the day, but the success of the partnership between Wagga Wagga City Council and the Raiders was evident with a first class sporting event delivered at a first class regional facility endorsed by the National Rugby League.

The restriction of limited ground capacity due to the pandemic allowed a maximum of 6,542 supporters into the venue.

The NRL premiership game was the second in a two-year deal after the 2020 fixture in Wagga Wagga was cancelled. The partnership was earlier this year extended to three games, with a 2022 return to the city now firmly on the Raiders' radar.

"We know the Raiders were very pleased with the event's delivery and already we're looking to next year's game," Council Strategic Recreation Officer Peter Cook said.

"The playing surface was right up there with the best we have seen. Council staff dedicated time and effort into the preparation of the ground and the venue's facilities to ensure the event was rolled out to everyone's expectations.

"We'll sit down with the Raiders in coming weeks to go over this year's outcomes and keep fine tuning to help us deliver an even better event in 2022.

"The pandemic might keep throwing challenges at us along the way, but we proved this year that preparation and planning goes a long way towards securing a great outcome for the community."

Former Raiders' star Simon Woolford blew the iconic Viking Horn and led the Viking Clap as part of Raiders supporters' pre-game tradition.

Earlier in the week, Raiders players were special guests at the Mortimer Shield junior rugby league carnival, visited local schools and also attended the wheelchair rugby league come-and-try day.

Former Raiders player Alan Tongue was also in Wagga Wagga where he delivered his Voice Against Violence workshop on respectful relationships.

Alan is an ambassador for the "We Do Respect. Do You?" campaign which was promoted during the event.

BALD ARCHY PRIZE COLLECTION DONATED TO MUSEUM

A collection of satiric portraits from the unique Bald Archy Prize art exhibition will be donated to Council's Museum of the Riverina.

Council this week agreed to the offer of donation from the estate of the exhibition founder the late Peter Batey OAM which consists of 27 winning portraits acquired from previous exhibitions which first started in 1994.

Part of accepting the donation included Council agreeing to administer a future annual acquisitive Bald Archy Prize art exhibition and related tour in memory of Mr Batey, who passed away in 2019, and acquire the future winning artworks to add to the permanent collection holding.

Council's Director Community Janice Summerhayes said having the collection in Council's care for future generations to enjoy was at the heart of this decision.

"The Museum of the Riverina will become the custodian of these 27 artworks which say so much about some of the characters in our country," Ms Summerhayes said.

"The Bald Archys lampoon the egos and excesses of celebrities and politicians. They are portraits of people who dominate the front pages and television headlines, but are not necessarily heroes to everyone."

The Bald Archy Prize art exhibition last toured in 2019 and was exhibited in the ACT, Queensland, Victoria and NSW, and has previously toured to Wagga Wagga and the wider Riverina region.

Visitation numbers to previous exhibitions of the Bald Archys in Wagga Wagga have always been strong, with visitors travelling from both within the region and more widely from NSW, ACT and Victoria.

The exhibition and prize has become part of the annual Australian art calendar. It is unique in many ways, highlighted by the chief judge who is a sulphur crested cockatoo named Maude.

WELCOME ADDITIONS: Manager Library Services Claire Campbell says the project will deliver more library resources and services for the local Punjabi community.

COLLABORATIVE PROJECT SET TO EXPAND LIBRARY'S MULTICULTURAL COLLECTIONS

Building on a strong history of collaborative research on multicultural communities in Wagga Wagga, the Wagga Wagga City Library is partnering with Charles Sturt University to engage with the city's Punjabi community.

The project is titled 'Embracing the cultural identity of burgeoning ethnic groups in regional public libraries: A pilot project with the Punjabi Indians' and is funded by the State Library of NSW.

The research, being undertaken by Charles Sturt University's Dr Sabine Wardle and Dr Kasey Garrison, will focus on how libraries promote multicultural collections and services to emerging groups like the growing Punjabi community in Wagga Wagga and the wider region.

The project working group has commenced and meetings are held regularly on Sundays in the Community Learning Space at the library.

The purpose of this study is to promote and embrace Punjabi cultural identity through public library services and address the collection and services offered to the Punjabi community by introducing a collection of culturally relevant resources and community activities.

Manager Library Services Claire Campbell said the university team has developed a survey about what resources the Punjabi community would like to be able to borrow, and what activities they would like to see at the library to support their community and celebrate their culture.

"The library will help to promote the survey, provide meeting spaces and contribute to the cost of new resources,"

Ms Campbell said.

"One of the main outcomes from the research will be the selection and purchase of new Punjabi resources informed by the community survey and ongoing discussions.

"These will be purchased by the research grant and from the library's collections' budget for culturally and linguistically diverse resources.

"Another important outcome of this project is the opportunity to welcome the Punjabi community to the library spaces to meet and to share their culture with the wider community."

This project is a further expansion of the library's multicultural collections and programs like Language Café and the Tech Savvy Communities classes delivered in Arabic, Dari and Yezidi.

This week's

Biodiversity Bite

Some plants are good at spreading their seeds, utilising animals and wind to spread far and wide. This also means that some garden plants can end up in nature reserves where they may outcompete native plants.

Privet and cotoneaster are good examples and can often be spotted in local reserves. If you have either of these species in your gardens, consider removing them responsibly and replacing them with a local native.

COUNCILLOR COLUMN

0447 231 080 | councillor.hayes@wagga.nsw.gov.au

A few Sundays ago I attended the most recent meeting of the Estella Progress Association. I've been attending these meetings for many years as it's always a great opportunity to find out what is happening in their suburb, to discuss both the big ticket items, as well as those smaller items that can improve the neighbourhood, and of course to meet the wonderful residents. While some of the villages also have progress associations, very few suburbs do and I think they are missing a trick.

When first elected I found that council would often leapfrog over existing suburbs when discussing council services and infrastructure. As with most things, the new gets the attention over the old. I am proud to say that there is change to that culture. For example, I've successfully advocated for improving our footpath network in existing suburbs, a review of library services to be able to do outreach to many neighbourhoods within Wagga, as well as putting more resources and a greater focus to Ashmont, Tolland, and Glenfield. There is of course more work to be done and that is where progress associations can play an important part. Uniting your voices, allowing a diverse range of views, and working constructively with Council is a simple way to improve our neighbourhoods and suburbs. There will of course be times when a consensus cannot be met, or a community will be divided about which direction to take, but more times than not, a better decision is made working together. I hope the community in Estella and the surrounding suburbs appreciate the value of the progress association and that its membership grows. I hope other suburbs also consider joining their voices together. Just like joining a union, a united voice gives you a greater opportunity to advocate for what your neighbourhood needs as time and time again it has been proven that decisions are made by those who actually show up.

Wiradjuri artist-in-residence to inspire young creatives

Young Wiradjuri and First Nations creatives are being encouraged to spend time with a local Wiradjuri artist as part of a pilot residency program at Wagga Wagga Art Gallery.

Lorraine Connelly-Northey, who is connected to the Williams family of the Narrandera 'Sand Hills', will be sitting in an artist-in-residence position for the eight-week Meet & Make program.

Each Tuesday Wiradjuri creatives, particularly those aged between 18 and 26, can join in a variety of practical art making sessions led by Ms Connelly-Northey.

"It's very exciting to have been invited by the gallery to share my traditional cultural knowledge and creative expertise to support our Wiradjuri youth," Ms Connelly-Northey said.

"Hopefully, it will inspire them to create and produce objects that acknowledge Wiradjuri culture, and when they take them home, every time they see it, they'll think about the course and it will be a talking point in their life.

CULTURAL CREATIVITY: Wiradjuri artist-in-residence Lorraine Connelly-Northey, Art Gallery Project Officer Maryanne Gray and Wiradjuri elder Aunty Cheryl Penrith encourage young creatives to join in the Meet & Make sessions.

"It's empowering, building self-esteem and giving participants an overall sense of belonging to our community."

Ms Connelly-Northey's artistic practice is influenced by her western and Aboriginal heritage where she transforms into sculptures materials, such as wire and corrugated iron found and scavenged on farms and country tips.

These sculptural creations reference coil-weaving and reflect traditional objects such as narrbang-galang (bush bags).

Wagga Wagga Art Gallery Project Officer Maryanne Gray said Aunty Cheryl Penrith is also supporting the residency as the Community Arts Project Advisor.

"One part of Aunty Cheryl Penrith's role will be to identify suitable young Wiradjuri and First Nations artists who would like the opportunity to work with a professional artist to develop their creative practice," Ms Gray said.

"Importantly, this pilot program will enable the Wagga Wagga Art Gallery to build deeper relationships and capacity for the 2022 and 2023 stages of this project which has been named 'Create on Country'."

The first Meet & Make was held on Tuesday 11 May, with a session to be held each Tuesday from 10am to 3pm at the Art Gallery's E3 Art Workshop space until 22 June.

For more information about the program, contact Maryanne Gray at the Wagga Wagga Art Gallery on 6926 9360 or email gray.maryanne@wagga.nsw.gov.au

Business Chamber achieves in partnership with Council

The partnership between Wagga Wagga City Council and the Wagga Wagga Business Chamber achieved several key objectives in the first 12 months of a two-year Memorandum of Understanding.

Despite the impact of the pandemic which took hold shortly after the signing in February last year, the Chamber was able to achieve 40 of its 48 objectives and also develop a four-year strategic plan.

The plan aims to support the city's small business community and Council objectives.

Mayor of the City of Wagga Wagga Councillor Greg Conkey OAM said the partnership between Council and the Chamber had already produced a number of positive outcomes.

"The MOU shows Council's support to the Chamber which has a dedicated focus on business development, education, advocacy, recognition and advice for businesses," Cr Conkey said.

"Wagga Wagga has a strong and successful business community across a broad range of sectors. The achievements outlined in the report to Council earlier this week supports this key partnership with those outcomes benefitting local businesses.

"It's important for Council and the Chamber to continue working closely to achieve these outcomes and I look forward to the next 12 months of this partnership."

Council received a report at its 10 May Ordinary Meeting updating the MOU's first 12 months.

One of the highlights of 2020 was the Golden Crow Awards being held in a modified format.

While COVID did have its impacts on other events throughout the year, the Chamber was still able to deliver 22 online and 23 face-to-face events.

This year will see the Chamber pushing the agenda on decentralisation, continue to support local business through education, information, programs and networking.

It will also address outstanding MOU items, implementing a new Customer Relationship Management system that will help connect members, continuing work in advocacy and making the region a priority, and supporting Council initiatives.
